

✓ SLSI's ISO 9000 certification goes beyond the borders of Sri Lanka

19th Feb 2003 Island

Sri Lanka Standards Institution (SLSI) achieved a significant landmark when its system certification activities spread its branches beyond the borders of Sri Lanka. SLSI, the national standards body and the member body of ISO in Sri Lanka is currently enjoying the market leadership in ISO System certification in the country. Now it has drawn the attention of the neighbouring countries as well.

With India already in the list, Maldives became the latest entrant of getting the Services of SLSI. Recently Sri Lanka Standards Institution awarded the prestigious ISO 9000 - 2000 certification to The Hulhulle Island Hotel of Maldives. This enunciates the increasing popularity and recognition for SLSI system certification in this part of the world.

The SLSI system certification, which has an enviable track record, has so far certified more than 175 companies locally with quite a number of companies are expected to be granted the certification in very near future.

ISO 9000 certification is primarily aimed at creating and sustaining best practices for the organizational success by providing mechanism for determining and fulfilling customer needs. In addition to that, with the reputation of the ISO certification is in crescendo worldwide, possessing ISO certification itself may enhance the image of the organization among all stockholders.

With the barriers for international trade are clearing gradually the ISO certification provides the impetus for the enterprises to highlight their quality and reliability universally.
